

IC CORPORATION ENTERS THE COMMERCIAL BUS MARKET

Known primarily as a school bus manufacturer, the subsidiary of Navistar is introducing five bus models into the commercial market. A key selling point: an integrated, one-stop approach to purchasing and servicing vehicles.

IC Corp., North America's largest school bus manufacturer, announced in June that it is expanding into the commercial bus market. The Warrenville, Ill. based company, a subsidiary of Navistar, is building upon its expertise in the school bus market with the introduction of five new commercial bus models.

The new bus line is the mid-size bus industry's only line of integrated buses, meaning that the chassis and body are built to work together for enhanced performance, increased durability and one-stop after sales support. The buses are targeted for use by various vocations, including hotels, rental car companies, airports, medical facilities, universities and tour companies. Each of the bus models caters to specific industry needs.

The commercial bus line will include a new low-floor bus (LC Series) built specifically for easy accessibility, a new medium-duty bus (HC Series), a new front-engine transit bus model (FC Series), a new rear-engine bus model (RC Series) and a new small bus model (BC Series). The buses will include options for the latest in GPS vehicle tracking technology called Aware Vehicle Intelligence that will give fleet managers real-time data about the bus location, speed, fuel efficiency, and maintenance needs.
